The Lonely Little Elephant

In the jungle there lived an elephant named Sam. He wasn't a great big elephant like the other elephants in the jungle. He was only a little elephant. And because he was only a little elephant, he was lonely.

All the other elephants used to laugh at him and call him 'shorty' and other horrid names.

Poor Sam, it seemed that he was all alone in the jungle and didn't have any friends.

But Sam had friends, only he didn't know about it.

You see, also living in the jungle was a ladybird (божья коровка) named Leopard. Leopard lived in a tree – a tree that talked. Theodor, the tree called himself.

These two had noticed that Sam was always alone, no one played with him, and no one spoke to him.

So they decided to do something about it.

One day, just as Sam was going past, the tree called out, "Hello there, little elephant."

Sam stopped and stared. But he couldn't see anyone.

Then the voice said, "It is me, the tree, I can talk."

Little Sam was absolutely amazed.

Then a little voice said: "My name is Leopard. We want to be your friends. But we want you to promise not to eat any of the leaves from my tree's branches."

Sam looked up at the juicy green leaves, that elephants love to eat.

"I promise," he said.

And Sam kept his.
